

AN UNJUST SENTENCE

Imposed Upon Bishop McNamara. ---The Right of Free Speech Refused by the Court.

A Review of the Evidence--Other Disgraceful Proceedings on the Part of the Prosecution.

A PACKED JURY.

CONTINUED FROM LAST WEEK. When the court had conveyed a heated argument was brought to bear upon the justice due the defendant by Messrs. Elliott and Burnham, and that Kenrick's "Moral Theology" should be introduced as evidence to prove the assertions of Bishop McNamara, as his lecture and statements were based upon the contents of this book.

The first witness for the defense was then called by Attorney Burnham, who was J. H. Fink. He stated that he was a Catholic and had lived in the vicinity since May of 1868. His evidence in the "particular points" of the case was clear, and took off such parts as would be necessary to make the charge stick.

Mr. Fink further said that there was "some excitement back at the door at one time," (referring to the entrance), also that "there were three separate missiles thrown in at the windows."

When the prosecution took the witness in hand he was closely cross-examined. He was finally asked if he was an A. P. A. To this question he asserted that he was.

Mr. L. A. May was examined and his "short hand" notes read, outside of which he knew very little regarding the lecture, and did not have it in full. During the examination Attorney Walsh did considerable coaching for Prosecuting Attorney Brown.

Mrs. McNamara, wife of the bishop, was next placed on the stand, and testified that no shots were fired from the carriage and that no fire arms were taken into it, also that she and the bishop were the only occupants.

Justice Nichols allowed each side twenty minutes to argue the case. The jury was out but a short time when the verdict was returned and the limit of the law given, $500 fine and one year in jail.

An appeal was taken to the criminal court by Burnham and Elliot. The other cases, one for the alleged slander of Mother Superior Rose Vincent, and the other for selling obscene literature, the book "Maria Monk," will be brought up soon.

A daily paper reported that members of the W. A. P. A. from Kansas were present. This is not true.

At least the largest portion of the population of Independence, Mo., the seat of the trial, has been brought to a decided position on the push question, and many of the citizens who have never before taken the matter into consideration are using the most bitter terms against the action, which they term persecution of a man for policy sake.

On Saturday, after the trial, the bishop was stricken with an attack of nervous prostration, and the prison physician recommended that he should not be moved from Independence to Kansas City until Monday. However the request was not complied with and he was brought to Kansas City Saturday night. His wife was refused admission to his cell Sunday morning when she visited the jail with food, and was obliged to wait until afternoon. Monday she was entirely refused the privilege of seeing him until Thursday. Through the kindness of the physician in attendance at the jail she had food taken to the bishop.

Many members of the A. P. A. have had their lives threatened recently by men who are known to them. One of the witnesses who testified in one of the McNamara cases was abused before he left the court room. He who claims this is a respectable man, and will attempt to prosecute the man who made the assertion.

Henry George and Michael de Young are ideal interviewers, perhaps because they are both of the craft themselves. Mr. George throws aside all pretensions when he is put on the stand. There is very little of the theater about him. He plunges at once into the subject and throws off paragraphs with such order and precision that it is impossible to forget what he has said. He has a way of becoming familiar at once with the reporter, and unlike many public men does not take it for granted that his views on all kinds of subjects are known in detail already and is yet afraid they will not be presented in proper form.

"I was thinking of Jefferson in 'Rip Van Winkle.' I went to see the dear old thing one night, and in the scene where the ghosts play ninepins soft rubber or woolen balls were evidently used, for they rolled noiselessly and dropped with an almost imperceptible sound. I thought how differently some others might have staged that. Mansfield, for instance, would probably have real balls, and the illusion would have been destroyed utterly. As it was, the game was as ghostly as the gamblers. In the treatment of that important character, Schneider, the same thought impressed itself upon me. Rip's dog is as distinct to one's mental vision as Rip himself, yet he does not once appear.

Strange as it may seem to some, the ingredients of the witches' cauldron in "Macbeth," at least a part of them, were once standard remedies among Europeans. In the tenth and eleventh centuries a sovereign cure for ague was the swallowing of a small toad that had been choked to death on St. John's eve, and a splendid remedy for rheumatism was to fasten the bands of clothing with pins that had been stuck into the flesh of either a toad or a frog. Physicians frequently recommend the water from a toad's brain for mental affections and that a live toad be rubbed over the diseased parts as a cure for the quinsy.---Chicago Herald.

A few members of the British peerage have made reputations as composers. The Earl of Westmoreland, first president of the Royal Academy of Music, composed some Italian operas, which were well received at Rome and Milan, and the father of the great Duke of Wellington, the Earl of Mornington, wrote several ones, which are still frequently performed at choral societies, though written more than a century ago. The present Earl of Mar has also composed some church music.---Paris Herald.

The head of a leading banking house has had his counsel investigate the law in regard to certified checks and finds that if the drawer of a check has taken it to the bank and had it certified he is still, jointly with the bank, responsible to the payee if the bank fails. If the payee, however, has taken the check to the bank and had it certified, the drawer of the check is no longer responsible to the payee, because the payee accepts by that action the responsibility of the bank.---Wall Street News.

Timid Young Author--Haven't you read my poem too hastily? I am sure, sir, it has some good features about it that you would see on a more careful reading. Editor (with a sudden suspicion)--You are not trying to work off an acoustic on us, are you, miss?---Chicago Tribune.

A Relic of St. Agnes.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22--The feast of St. Agnes was consecrated at St. Agnes church in this city. Rev. H. A. Braun, the rector of the church, before the gospel, announced the receipt of a relic of the patron saint brought by Mgr. Morguis of Montreal. It is said to be a piece of the vertebra and is in a jeweled casket. The rector invited the people to test its miraculous powers during the coming week.
